

SUICIDE PREVENTION
ASSISTANT or ASSOCIATE PROFESSOR (University Tenure Line or Medical Center Line)
DIVISION OF PUBLIC MENTAL HEALTH AND POPULATION SCIENCES
PSYCHIATRY AND BEHAVIORAL SCIENCES

The Department of Psychiatry and Behavioral Sciences at Stanford University School of Medicine seeks a full-time Assistant or Associate Professor in the University Tenure Line or Medical Center Line. The successful candidate will utilize multi-disciplinary methodology, such as genetics, brain imaging, epidemiology, and/or behavioral science, to conduct cutting-edge research focused on suicide and/or suicide prevention toward the goal of developing new clinical interventions and cognitive neuroscience models of suicidality. In addition, the candidate will provide expert compassionate clinical care, teach and supervise Stanford trainees in psychiatry, clinical psychology, as well as medical students. Excellent clinical training and related post-training work experience in an academic setting are expected.

Applicants must possess clinical doctoral level training in General Psychiatry, Psychology, or a related clinical field, and be currently licensed or fully eligible for a California medical license or a California license to practice clinical psychology.

The predominant criterion for appointment in the University Tenure Line is a major commitment to research and teaching. The major criteria for appointment, reappointment and promotion for faculty in the Medical Center Line is excellence in the overall mix of clinical care, clinical teaching, scholarly activity that advances clinical medicine, and institutional service.

Stanford University is an equal opportunity employer and is committed to increasing the diversity of its faculty. It welcomes nominations of and applications from women and members of minority groups, as well as others who would bring additional dimensions to the university's research, teaching and clinical missions. Interested candidates should send a copy of their curriculum vitae, a brief letter outlining their interests and the names of three references via e-mail only to:
